Atatürk Pitted Against İnönü

Once Atatürk and İnönü were eating breakfast together. Atatürk kept eating black olives.¹ He ate a great many of them, and as he ate them, he kept dropping the pits on İnönü's plate. He then said to İnönü, "Alas, what a gluttonous person you are to have eaten so many olives!"

İnönü answered, "You are really the more gluttonous. I have been watching you eat olive after olive, and apparently you ate even the pits, for there are no pits on your plate."

¹Black olives are a staple of Turkish breakfast menus.
